

McCormick Foundation and Denver Post Support Low-Income Youth and Literacy Programs through Denver Post Charities

Chicago, November 15, 2011 — The Robert R. McCormick Foundation and the Denver Post have announced $408,000 in third-quarter funding through Denver Post Charities, a McCormick Foundation Fund, which will help 32 nonprofit organizations provide a broad range of programs helping low-income youth achieve academic success, complete high school, and enter post-secondary education or vocation programs.

Since 1992, over 1,600 grants totaling more than $55 million have been granted through Denver Post Charities to nonprofit organizations providing support to those in need across the greater Denver metropolitan region. The McCormick Foundation matches all gifts at 50 cents on the dollar, increasing the impact of individual contributions. The Foundation and Denver Post pay all campaign and administrative costs, ensuring that 100 percent of all donations, plus the match, is granted to local nonprofit agencies with programs that improve the lives of children, families and adults across the Denver community.
